

Empty Space

Simply put empty space (also called white space) is the area that surrounds the subject.

It acts as breathing room for your eyes. Too little empty space results in images that are cluttered and busy with every element in the photo screaming for your attention.

This also makes the subject image command more attention.

Create your own Static Image:

Using the elements and techniques of static imagery, you are to create your own image based on Isle of Dogs.

In this image you must:

Express an idea.

Use one of the provided quotes.

Connect your image and quote to your idea.

The most important thing to remember:

This is NOT a movie poster!

You are not advertising the film! You are expressing an idea centred around a theme, symbol or concept from the film.

Quotes

1) What ever happened to man's best friend?

2) Did you hear the rumour?

3) Somebody is up to something.
